Employables Will Be Made Fitter For Following Occupations

prevail more have as far not been acted upon, and two have been rejected.

In a press interview accompanying the release of the report, A. B. Purvis, commission chairman, emphasized that all of the recommendations would be of a permanent nature.

DEMANDED ACTION
In its work the commission had been confronted with problems calling for immediate solution, and it has grappled with these, rather than with "long range" questions which might have relation to future generations.

"One thing that should be underlined," he said, "is the necessity of continuing to work down problems into all the types of area involved. The commission has tried to deal with a complex problem in a general way, and the only hope has been in fairness to the person who accepts relief to understand all types of people and the problems attached to each geographical area."

The commission chairman believed registration of an unemployed would clarify the position of the unemployed in a general way, and in the future.

"One thing that you have broken down, you have to have the machinery whereby to tackle the problem," he said. "The commission has run temporarily up against a brick wall which is related to the constitutional issues involved. We recommend that employment services should be organized nationally, for it is fundamental these should be extended, and they should be efficient in that they have been appointed."

HAVE NO CONTROL
The commission held strongly that Mr. Purvis, that the present method of indiscriminate questioning to the provinces, without any control over the action, and distribution of the money, should be changed.

"This method of making grants-in-aid, without any special training, is not a good method," he said. "The commission has tried to deal with a complex problem in a general way, and the only hope has been in fairness to the person who accepts relief to understand all types of people and the problems attached to each geographical area."

FOR RE-TRAINING
The commission had therefore recommended to the government that a special unit be organized for reconditioning, training and retraining of the unemployed. Half of this unit should be devoted to the retraining of the unemployed in the local area, and the remainder to the older age-group.

"These plans were not proposed as a means of increasing the employability of reedy unemployed," he said. "The commission has tried to deal with a complex problem in a general way, and the only hope has been in fairness to the person who accepts relief to understand all types of people and the problems attached to each geographical area."

PRODUCE RESULTS
Amplifying this, Mr. Purvis declared local voluntary committees were being created to gain knowledge of the locality's special conditions. With their cooperation, he said, the commission would be able to give effect to this recommendation, and on the basis of the government's subsidies, to carry out the work of the government.

Producing tangible and lasting results, the commission's report was a plan to produce a new type of work in that location, in other words where work was available," the commission's report was.

NAVY ORDER REGARDED AS HINT TO ITALY

Charge Ask Foreign Office Meaning Of Admiralty Instructions
LONDON, Aug. 19.—Hans News Agency reported last night diplomatic observers predicted the new series of Mediterranean incidents involving merchant shipping would cause postponement of the Anglo-Italian conversations tentatively scheduled to start in Rome early next month.

A British tanker was bombed by airplanes in one of the incidents while ships of other nationalities were torpedoed by submarines. The attacks led the admiralty to issue orders that British warships will sink any submarine attacking a British merchantman.

"Have," in its copyright dispatch, said naval circles interpreted the government's instructions to the admiralty as a direct warning to Italy.

The dispatch added it was believed British ships were being harassed by Italian submarines, and that the government was determined to take a hard line against any Anglo-Italian conversations regarding the Mediterranean sea until the situation, growing out of the bitter Spanish civil war, was resolved.

GRAND CANYON ISLAND TO BE CLIMBERS' GOAL
WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A group of scientists prepared today to explore an "island in the sky," a place never before visited by man.

The "island" is the remote and isolated Shipwreck Island, 7,000 feet above sea level in the Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona. It is a large island with a large building, its sheer walls formed by millions of years of wear and tear from the Colorado river.

Modern explorers want to know whether there is a small town on the heavily wooded island. The expedition is to be led by the American Museum of Natural History.

The expedition to start September 18 will be carried out by the American Museum of Natural History. The "island" is the remote and isolated Shipwreck Island, 7,000 feet above sea level in the Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

DEAR MISS DIX—I am very sensitive and easily hurt, and when I am I can keep from crying and when I hurt like this, I cry. I am a woman, I thought I should be able to keep my feelings under control, but I can't. I have received more letters from you than I can read, and I have to leave you to go to bed. I am a woman, I thought I should be able to keep my feelings under control, but I can't. I have received more letters from you than I can read, and I have to leave you to go to bed. I am a woman, I thought I should be able to keep my feelings under control, but I can't. I have received more letters from you than I can read, and I have to leave you to go to bed.

Personally, I have never had the slightest sympathy with the cry-baby woman. She has always been to me a weak and contemptible creature, one who sat down and howled for what she wanted until someone's weapon to keep every one around her working in fear for the turning of the water works.

Why everybody should be so terrified of crying women, I don't know, but they are. There is something in women's tears that just seems to melt down your backbone and make an impossible dealing with them. No doubt a psychologist would say that crying releases some sort of a nervous tension in them and leaves them at peace with themselves and the world.

Millions of women who are strong and able-bodied are supported by others because they always cry when anybody suggests they get a job. Millions of women have turned their husbands into drunks by crying. And millions of other women have found themselves in marriage on their knees crying on the shoulders of men who didn't want to marry them but who did marry them because they didn't have nerve enough to turn off the tear taps.

Taking it all around, tears are probably the best hint and grief that women have ever discovered. So, perhaps the weeping women know what they are about when they get out their handkerchiefs.

I can but congratulate your sense, though on her fortitude in putting a damper on her tears instead of encouraging them. It is the only way she can save herself from a lifetime of slavery to a woman who can never be treated like a rational human being and who always has to be patted and coaxed and soothed and so on.

And that gets pretty tiresome as the years go by for the weeping woman. As Mr. Maudsley in "Diogenes" story used to say, it is the most unpleasant habit. As your boy friend answers to be of the same opinion you are who decide to stop crying in private. Only that will take all the pep out of it because weeping keeps to be seen and heard much of.

DYING PEOPLE DO NOT USUALLY SUFFER ACONY

The "valley of the shadow of death" does not mean that it is a painful experience for, except in rare cases, agony in death is only a myth, medical men say. The entire routine is repeated each day, rain or shine, late or early.

Naturally, this handsome office worker does not depend entirely on a nightly beauty treatment and cosmetic to keep her skin and figure young and lovely. She is much too sensible for that. Her reputation of a "milk and honey" day, a well planned diet and enough sleep never has lagged.
